THE PASTEUR CHAMBERLAND GERM FILTER.

"There is only one kind of domestic filter which is really scientifically efficient—that known as the Pasteur Chamberland Filter. Briefly, unless you have a Pasteur Chamberland Filter, in England at all events you had better not get out of it, because it more frequently happens than not that you put cleaner water in the ordinary filter than you get out of it."

Professor ANDERSON STUART,
President Board of Health,
London.

"I would never drink tap water than that from the ordinary carbon filter. The only recognized safe pattern of filter is the Pasteur Chamberland form."

Dr. PHILLIP E. MITSKEFF,
Author of "The Art of Living in Australia" and other standard works.

After thorough investigation in the Research Laboratory of the Royal College of Physicians, London, a led to the Public Health Laboratory of the University of Edinburgh, and the action of every known class of filter on the British market, the test of which will be found in the British Medical Journal, 26th December, 1904, the following joint conclusions were arrived at:

- a) The Pasteur Filter is the only filter proved to prevent the communication of water-borne disease.
- b) The large majority of filters, including every one hitherto made in England, are absolutely unsafe to the purpose; and
- c) Whenever they were examined on this point they proved to be liable to increase the danger, making good water and bad water worse.

These results, which are now scientifically and officially established, are startling, because the filters previously supposed to have been supported by chemical and bacteriological certificates.

Specimens of the Pasteur Chamberland Germ Filter can be seen at

The number of orders for February and the outlook for next port market is promising. With the growth in trade, probably, prices will harden. That is the ordinary result of an increased demand for coal or any other commodity there is no reason to suppose that it will be different in Newcastle.

No fair observer would be tempted to underestimate the part which is played by labour in the production of wealth, even if the shouting of labour orators would to cease. It is the most

The change in the weather has been a fortunate one for city and country. After three or four days of such great and continuous as to have established a record which none of the present generation will dare to experience again, Friday and Saturday brought the first complete break of temperance, large heavy showers and thunder storms on Friday evening visited a large extent of the

It is equally clear that not an acre of coal raised without labour; and when wealth has actually been amassed, it can neither be enjoyed nor turned to a profitable account in fresh undertakings without the employment of more labour. It is equally essential to the creation and the use of wealth. This, however, is almost a truism, which requires no explanation or illustration.

In his proposal, it was urged by the Miners' Association that in a policy of "directing and directing" the Government should take control of the industry of the country when it was being ruined by reckless speculation. Alderman Peck said that the Government had not taken any action, and that the Government to the general wealth of the colony had neglected. Mr. CUDLEY, of the Miners' Association, and Mr. HARRIS, of the Chamber of Commerce, both agreed with the last analysis, they need be no longer taken into account. It will be found by a more perusal with the added experience of Mr. Atkinson, how true it is, as we saw, of several of the older miners, that "the man who has his own horse and cart," or, in other words, his own capital, and his labour will provide him with nothing more than a fire, unless it is properly directed and its products are profitably exchanged. In the production of wealth there must be knowledge, foresight, and many other qualities which can hardly be compressed in the term labour. It is in reality a triumph of mind rather than of strength, just as truly as is the creation of a statue. His horse and cart are his tools.

The work is now being done, and the estimated cost is about £100,000. It is estimated that even at the present time some 90 per cent. of the boats sent to the yards are ready for delivery in less than three days, and on Sundays the men are at work all night.

REPAYMENT OF A STRATHFIELD LOAN.—During the month the Strathfield Council received debentures to the value of £1600. The loan of £1000 was repaid last week, and the council effected a saving of interest, which was the rate of 3½ per cent.

most cheering prospect for the sugar industry is the increase of demand at home with the freeing of the market for it. Under this auspice the price of sugar is increasing. In fact raised by those interested in its sale. On all aspects of the trade are being made some alleviation of the tariff will be found by other departments for other places. More men are left for those who remain must not be forgotten that the ad valorem and other duties have somewhat reduced the the sense of providing it with implements and of finding work for it. This, again, is only possible by encouraging investment in the sugar industry, and by discouraging what products are most wanted in the different markets of the world. At the present moment the complaint in Great Britain is, not that the labourer has lost his strength, but that the intelligent direction of labour is not as complete as it ought to be. When this happens the unfortunate labourer is the first to suffer, and if he receives any comfort from the discipline of his leaders, it must be of that sort which

DEATH OF SIR FREDERIC LEIGHTON.

LONDON, Jan. 26. The death is announced of Sir Frederic Leighton, Bart., R.A., President of the Royal Academy, in his 66th year.

Sir Frederic, who had been in failing health for some time past, caught a chill, the immediate cause of death being syncope.

In his dying agony he murmured, "My love to the Academy."

The President of the Royal Academy has not long been permitted to enjoy the peace bestowed upon him at New Year, as announced in this column. He is dead in his 66th year, which is youth compared with the age of many other eminent British men of the reign. He was born on the 21st December, 1829, at Southborough, a village in the parish of St. Andrew, in the county of Lincoln.

His father was Dr. F. S. Leighton, of the church of St. Andrew, in the parish of St. Andrew, in the county of Lincoln.

EUROPEAN SITUATION.

RUSSIA AND TURKEY.

THE REPORTED TREATY.

CONFLICTING STATEMENTS.

(By Cable.) (FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, Jan. 26. The report that a treaty has been entered into between Russia and Turkey is denied in many quarters.

The Constantinople correspondent of the Speaker confirms the report as to the ratification of the treaty, and adds that the Sultan has sent a number of his famous jewels, said to be worth £35,000, as presents to the Czar.

ATTITUDE OF THE SULTAN.

DECORATIONS FOR AMBASSADORS.

LONDON, Jan. 26. The Vienna correspondent of the Times says that it is reported to be the intention of the Sultan of Turkey to lavishly decorate the Russian and French Ambassadors in Constantinople.

JINGOISM AROUSED IN AMERICA.

ENGLAND AND PRESIDENT CLEVELAND.

LONDON, Jan. 26. Mr. G. W. Smalley, the New York correspondent of the Times, telegraphs that the reported agreement between Russia and Turkey has seriously aroused jingoism in America.

He voices what he regards as the feeling of the United States Government and the commercial classes by urging England to meet the views of President Cleveland promptly.

SPEECH BY MR. CHAMBERLAIN.

GERMANY'S ENMITY TOWARDS ENGLAND.

LONDON, Jan. 26. In the course of a speech which he delivered yesterday, Mr. Chamberlain, Secretary of State for the Colonies, stated that the enmity displayed by Germany towards England had determined the British Government upon increasing the defences of the country.

America was rightly attached to the Monroe doctrine, which England did not dispute. War between England and the United States, he declared, was an impossibility. He wished he was able to count upon the support of America in regard to Armenia. England's protests against the present unsatisfactory state of affairs in that country had proved fruitless, and the other European Powers were apathetic in the matter.

INCREASE IN THE GERMAN NAVY.

THADE WITH ENGLAND.

A THOMAS OUTLOOK.

Mr. James Inglis, ex-M.L.A., returned to Sydney yesterday by the mail steamer "Orontes," which arrived at the wharf at 10 p.m. Mr. Inglis, who had been in the United States for some time, was met by a large number of friends, and was warmly welcomed.

THE CAMPBELLTOWN ENCAMPMENT.

The camp presented a lively appearance on an early morning. The troops were very early engaged in making arrangements for their accommodation while under canvas. Many of the men, after a long journey by road through the excessive heat of the previous day, but the operations were carried out with a bit, with the break of dawn a drenching rain commenced to fall, continuing at intervals throughout the morning, thus militating considerably against any enjoyment which might have been had.
